Spotlight on a Child: Brittany Reddick

Brittany was born on December 1, 1998. She weighed 7lb & 7 oz, 21 in. long. I saw her briefly before she was taken to the NICU. We were not given much hope; the Dr. said she would not live 48 hours. If she did, she would not have any quality of life. He said she would be deaf, blind, never walk or talk, never be able to eat on her own. She had to have a tracheotomy at 7 days. After 3 days, she was introduced to a bottle. We did not know if she could suck, breathe, and swallow, but she latched on like a pro. This was a huge milestone for us, after all we had been told. She continued to improve and on December 20, 1998, we brought our baby girl home. It was the best Christmas gift EVER!

We then found a wonderful pediatrician, Dr. Reginald Pilcher. He was a blessing from God. Our first visit, he looked at her and said we are going to start over, she's going to do all kinds of things. And she has!!

At 3 months old she had the trach removed. At 4, she sat up by herself. She never crawled, but she did walk at 18 months. She also started saying words before she was 1, and was potty trained by 2 ½ years old. There have been down times and roadblocks, but there have been many more blessings.

She is now 14 years old, in 7th grade. She walks, talks, runs, dances, and laughs, just like any other child would do. She has a learning disability, but she deals with it well.

She receives therapy and enjoys it. She is planning to get her learners license when she turns 15. She has a golf cart that she loves to drive! I have watched my miracle baby bloom into a beautiful blessing with every second of her life.

I am sure there will be more trials as she gets older, but I know the Lord has watched over her from day one and will continue. Brittany has always been somewhat of a loner. She loves people, but she enjoys her time by herself. She is a happy young lady. She struggles with education but loves school. It takes her a while, but she gets it.

As a baby, we could not get therapy or assistance for Brittany. I felt like I was at a dead end. Then she started school. I am not even sure how, but Sarah Ashe was placed in our path. I found a

Wonderful Winter Conferences

Recently several of our staff and parents attended conferences focusing on the population of special needs children that we serve at the Center. This was possible through a Planter's EMC grant and monies received from Walk for Autism. Two of those who attended share their experience of hope and encouragement received from the conferences.

Across the Spectrum: Georgia Autism Conference I have a 6-year-old grandson who has Asperger's. I would watch him sleep each night and pray for the Lord to give me one hour in his head so I could hear, see and feel what he feels. Well, the Lord answered my prayers. I was blessed to be able to go to the Autism Conference in Atlanta. On the second day the speaker was an adult with Asperger's. She explained what it was like to have Asperger's, what you hear, see and feel. I was so blessed by this. At the conference I learned so many amazing things, and I have been able to use those things with my grandson. Thank you so much for this opportunity; it was so amazing.

Director's Letter

I am sitting here this morning bundled up waiting for the Spring weather to come and hoping for a few words of encouragement to share with all of you who follow the works going on here at CFNB! Springtime gets me thinking about new life, flowers, sunshine and the coming of Summer Break :).

What perfect timing the Lord had, when He planned the resurrection of His son Jesus. There are no accidents in His plans, the promises of new birth and growth of Springtime pale in comparison to the new life and growth found in a renewed life resting in Him who came and died to lead us to a personal relationship with our Father in heaven. My prayer this morning is that all may accept that truth today and seek to grow in the knowledge that His presence and love is not just for the afterlife but for the here and now. Commit today in the newness of Spring to take the time to seek Him with all your heart, mind and spirit. In my quiet times I have been parked in 1st & 2nd Corinthians for a while, I encourage all of you to read these amazing books (and many more!). Lots of things happening here as you can see in this newsletter, soon we may have to go to more pages to cover more of the amazing happenings here. All of our programs serve a variety of purposes and each important in their own way, but recently we have seen a renewed surge of families with children in the Autism Spectrum seeking us out. I am sure you have seen the numbers have increased again in occurrence of this in children with reports of anywhere from 1:88 to 1:50! April is Autism Awareness month, please keep these families in your prayers as they seek out direction in how best to meet their child's and their family's needs. As always I thank all who support us in our endeavors to help these families by the giving of your time, financial support, and prayers. I encourage all who want to know more about the programs at the Center to come by and visit. I guarantee you will be amazed and blessed, as I am every day, to be a part of this wonderful ministry to His children! Our hope is to be \(Matthew 5:14-16\) "A city set on a hill...let your light shine before others, so that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven."

to Connect" conference this winter in Orlando. Dr. Karyn Purvis from Texas Christian University was the featured speaker, but we also heard from several adoptive parents. I listened not only to the fascinating, extensive research these dedicated scientists have done, but also to the heart-rending stories of families who paved the way in real life for deeper understanding of our precious "children from hard places." These children may include not only those who have been fostered or adopted, but also children from a stressful prenatal history, difficult birth, or any other traumatic early-life experience which can negatively affect the development of the brain and how it functions. It was even more amazing to hear the ways TCU has learned to reshape these young brains and gently but dramatically alter the course of their future lives. What a blessing to experience the genuine hope being offered and compassionately explained to powerfully impact our children's' lives. It will take everything I have,

We encourage parents and caregivers to join us as we attend these conferences in the future. Also, ask about our excellent video and book resources purchased from these events for check-out through the Center!

Parent Support Group Update

Tuesday, April 30th at 6:30 will be our next Parent Support Meeting. The topic is Autism as we celebrate April as Autism Awareness Month. There will also be a drawing for an "Autism Bear" from Build-a-Bear workshop in Augusta. Childcare is available, let us know by Apr. 25 so that we can have the staff available. Thanks to Tracey Ouzts for coordinating the meetings, speakers, and snacks, allowing parents to enjoy this time of support and encouragement to be better equipped in the journey of raising their child. Special thank you to Heloise and Justin Salter for speaking at our last meeting. They inspired parents of children with physical disabilities to pursue all options and never stop believing the possibilities. Because of their success with augmentative communication devices, CSRA

Therapy connected two families with a DynaVox representative to evaluate their communication needs. She has agreed to meet with other families in our area here at the Center who may benefit from their programs! Call us for more information.

new kind of hope. She worked with Brittany and helped me find resources, therapy, and gave me the support I had been praying for. She worked with Brittany in so many ways. I could just see a change taking place in her. Brittany has been tutoring at the center. She receives her therapy at the center, which is such a blessing since we live in Girard, so it is already a little drive but not what it would be if we had to go to Augusta. She is in group and enjoys it so much. She loves her friends in the group and when she is with these girls, she feels equal and does not stress over not being like the other girls at school. She has become much more confident and mature since she has been attending the center. The center has been an educational place for her, not just with her schooling but with everyday life. There are so many amazing things that take place that I never dreamed would happen. I pick her up, and she starts chatting about what they have done and what they are going to do. Everyone is like family at the center. I could not have picked a better place for my child to learn and grow than the Center for New Beginnings. It has given us a new beginning; that is for sure.
